Liturgical and stylistic contextualisation

Placing a score into the appropriate liturgical and stylistic context, it was created and intended for. Achieved by creating liturgical anthologies, as well as thematic monographies.

Layout and typography

Contemporary (yet "classical" enough) design and typographic consistency (according to the Project's general guidelines). Text conveniently transcribed into contemporary orthography.

Liturgical and scientific apparatus

- information about melody:
- · titles in original orthography;
- translation of hymnology;
- short liturgical directions;
- additional explanations: etc.

Customization

Not only digitization of score in its original form, but also expert adaptations of initial material, for specific needs of various types of ensembles: in this example: monophonic score, harmonized and adapted for 4-part mixed choir.

It's not just about simply going digital, but about making full use of digitization process specificities, team members' professional capabilities and expertise, and digital format technical possibilities.

All-Night Vigil (Vespers, Matins, First Hour)

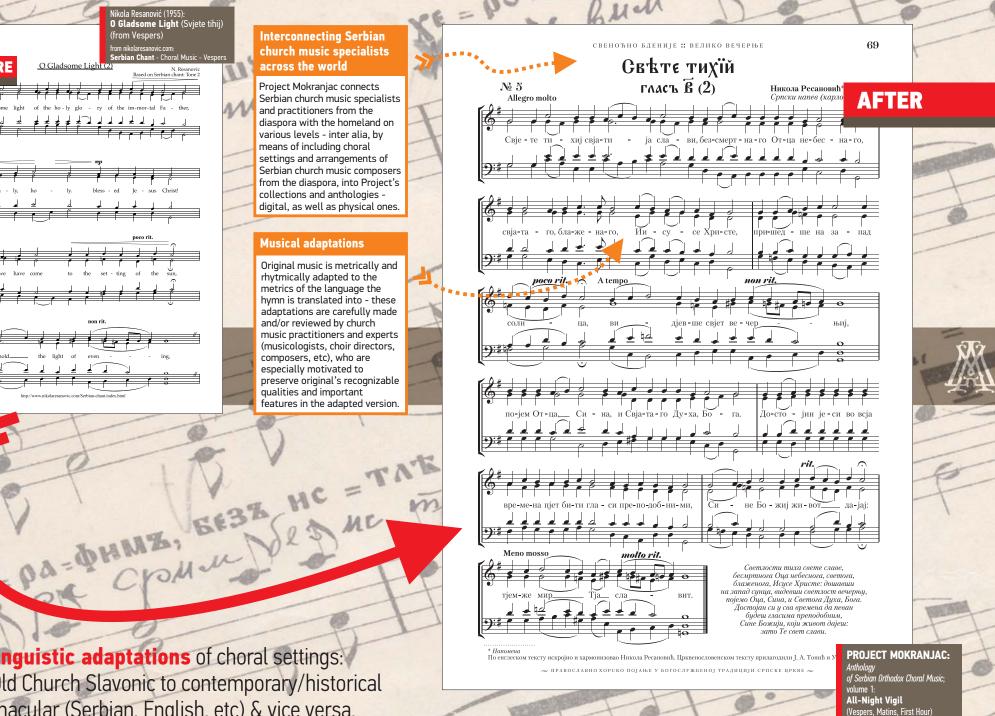

Interconnecting Serbian church music specialists across the world

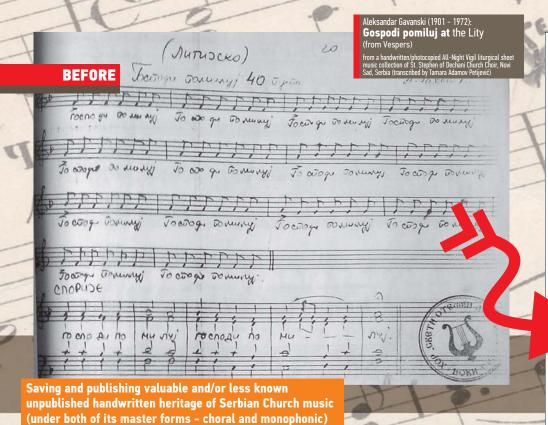

Project Mokranjac connects Serbian church music specialists and practitioners from the diaspora with the homeland on various levels - inter alia, by means of including choral settings and arrangements of Serbian church music composers from the diaspora, into Project's collections and anthologies digital, as well as physical ones.

Musical adaptations

Original music is metrically and rhytmically adapted to the metrics of the language the hymn is translated into - these adaptations are carefully made and/or reviewed by church music practitioners and experts (musicologists, choir directors, composers, etc), who are especially motivated to preserve original's recognizable qualities and important features in the adapted version.

Linguistic adaptations of choral settings: from Old Church Slavonic to contemporary/historical vernacular (Serbian, English, etc) & vice versa, with ease and reliability.

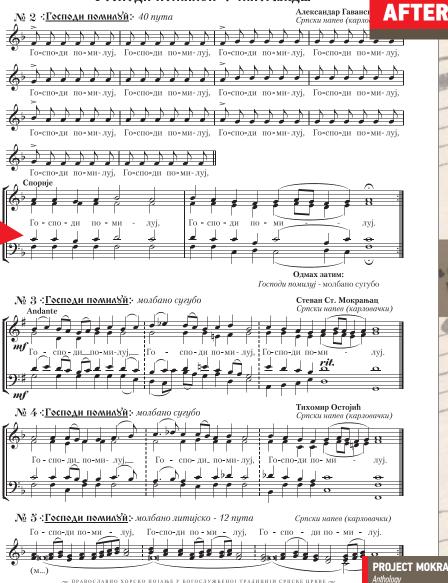

Digitization process makes conservation, restoration and popularization of old, valuable, but less known choral arrangements of Serbian chant, saved in old composers' manuscripts (autographs) and handwritten transcripts of choir librarians, possible and realistic. Often neglected and almost forgotten, this valuable handwritten sheet music heritage obtains, through the process of its notographical refreshment and expert musical, historical, liturgical and informational contextualization, an opportunity to be returned to its primary, sacred environment and its primary, liturgical use, as well as to become fully publicly recognized as one of the cornerstones of Serbian classical music culture.

Bringing monumental, but unpublished and insufficiently known examples of Serbian Church music, to the church directors, church choirs, professional musicians, as well as to the wider public

Project Mokranjac is an ideal technical and professional environment for efficient and high-quality digitization, electronic and classical publishing of valuable unpublished works of Serbian church music classics. The importance of this notion is underlined by the fact that more than 90% of Serbian Church music written heritage is still unpublished and relatively unknown, lying, often almost forgotten and rather neglected, in scientific, church and choral archives and libriaries. This includes not only the practically motivated simple arrangements set by choral directors, librarians, etc, but also, to a significant extent, notable classical works (and even masterworks) of some of the greatest and the most important Serbian Church music melographers and composers, as well, Kornelije Stanković's monumental legacy being just the most prominent, but, by no means the only noteworthy, example of this.

Valuable material in the new context

Affirmation of valuable and significant old liturgical music choral settings and collections, originally arranged for four-part male choir (which was very common type of choral ensemble in the Serbian Church in the midst of the 20th century), through its transposition and adaptation for the nowadays most popular mixed four-part choir type.

Musical adaptations and transpositions:

from four-part male and three-part female choir, to mixed four-part choir and vice versa. Flexible adaptations of great sacred choral works, for small ensembles, etc.
